

“The Methods workshop is a special event, because it is the first step in a research on methodologies, an important path to follow, a project in progress. Right from the start we at Cittadellarte have been enthusiastically working to seek new situations, new content, new activities that interact with society. Cittadellarte is divided into different sections that we call Offices, different nuclei using different methodologies. We aren't looking for a general and definitive methodology, but individual methodologies: the diversity of working methods can really create a network of differences, which, taken from another point of view, represents the very structure of society. What is relevant is that here, for the first time, the focus is on the differences between artistic projects intervene in society. The Geographies of Change exhibition, of which this project is part, is an example of how at Cittadellarte we are working to generate connections to create a network of participation and interaction toward responsible transformation of society”.

Excerpt from the opening speech of Michelangelo Pistoletto
at the Methods workshop (2004)